

Why Insurance Adjusters Want a Fast Recorded Statement After a Midland Wreck The call often comes within a day or two. You're sore, your car is sitting at a body shop off Front Street, and a friendly adjuster from the other driver's insurance company wants to "just get your side of the story" on a recorded line. It can feel like a routine step. It isn't. A recorded statement is evidence, and it's usually gathered to help the insurer, not you. Why the rush? Early on, you may not know how badly you're hurt. Soft tissue injuries, concussions and back problems often feel worse over the following days. If you tell an adjuster you're "fine" or "a little sore" on day two, those words can be played back months later while you're in physical therapy. Adjusters also know that memories are shaky right after a crash. Small differences in how you describe speed, distance or timing on a road like Loop 250 north or Andrews Highway can later be used to question your credibility. The adjuster may sound kind and patient, and many are. But their job is to close the file for as little as possible, and a fast recorded statement is one of the easiest ways to do that before you've even seen a doctor twice. What should you avoid saying? Don't admit fault or apologize, even out of politeness. Texas uses proportionate responsibility, so any statement suggesting you were partly to blame can reduce your recovery, and if you're found more than 50 percent at fault you can't recover at all. Don't guess about speeds or distances. Don't downplay your injuries or describe your medical condition before a doctor has. It's perfectly okay to tell the caller you'd rather not give a recorded statement right now and that someone will follow up with them.

Founder Jimmy Doan was named to the Top 25 Motor Vehicle Trial Lawyers in 2026, and insurers know which firms are prepared to go to court. What should you not tell your insurance company after a crash? Avoid apologizing, guessing about speed or distances, or saying you feel fine before a doctor has checked you. Anything you say in a recorded statement can be used to argue you share the blame, which matters under Texas rules that cut your recovery by your percentage of fault. The Doan Law Firm can handle those calls for you from the start. What is the biggest mistake people make with a car accident claim? Delaying medical treatment is one of the most costly. The Doan Law Firm documents both economic losses and non-economic harm, such as pain, mental anguish and physical impairment, before negotiating with insurers. What is the hardest injury to prove after a car accident? Injuries that don't show up on an X-ray, like whiplash, soft tissue damage, mild traumatic brain injury and post-crash anxiety, are often the hardest to prove. Consistent treatment records, doctor notes and a daily pain journal help. The Midland team investigates beyond the police report to build evidence that insurers can't easily dismiss. Can I get compensation for anxiety after a car accident? Yes, Texas law allows recovery for mental anguish when it is tied to the crash and properly documented. Fear of driving, trouble sleeping and panic attacks after a wreck on I-20 or SH 191 are real harms. The Doan Law Firm can connect clients with trusted medical professionals so these effects are recorded and valued fairly. How likely is it to get sued after a car accident in Midland? Most crash claims settle through insurance without anyone being personally sued, especially when the at-fault driver carries at least the Texas minimum of 30/60/25 coverage. Lawsuits become more likely when injuries are serious and exceed the policy limits.
