

When a dog attack leaves someone hurt in Atlanta, the rules may not be what you assume.

Certain states impose liability regardless of the animal's history. Georgia does not work that way. The claim generally turns on whether the owner knew the animal was dangerous, or whether the dog was loose in violation of a local leash ordinance.

Proving prior knowledge is difficult. Owners rarely volunteer that a dog has snapped truck accident lawyer before, and neighbors are often reluctant to get involved.

The ordinance route is frequently more provable, which is why the car wreck legal help first questions are about where the dog was and whether a complaint was ever filed.

This evidence does not last. Prior complaints and witness memory both degrade, and the dog itself may be gone before anyone captures what it had done before.

Flanagan Law is a personal injury trial firm in Atlanta, Georgia, handling serious injury and trial work.

These claims are usually covered by homeowner insurance, which surprises people who assume they would be suing a neighbor personally. A large share of severe bites involve children, and facial scarring is common because of height. Those cases should not be valued quickly.

How much does a personal injury lawyer cost in Atlanta?

Most personal injury lawyers in Georgia work on a contingency fee, which means the fee comes out of the recovery instead of out of pocket. There is no attorney fee if there is no recovery. Flanagan Law, P.C. handles Atlanta injury cases on a contingency fee and does not charge for the first conversation, so an injured person can find out where they stand before deciding anything.

How long do I have to file an injury claim in Georgia?

Georgia generally gives an injured person two years from the date of the injury to file a personal injury lawsuit, and a claim against a city, county or state agency can require written notice far sooner than that. Waiting also makes proof harder to collect, because records and camera footage do not last forever. Flanagan Law, P.C. reviews the deadlines that apply to a specific Atlanta case at no cost.

What should I do after a truck accident in Atlanta?

Get medical care, report the wreck, and avoid giving a recorded statement to the trucking company's insurer before you talk to a lawyer. Trucking companies often send their own investigators to the scene within hours, and evidence such as onboard data and camera footage can be overwritten or lost in days. Flanagan Law, P.C. moves early in truck cases to preserve that evidence.

Do I have to go to court for a personal injury case?

Most injury claims settle without a trial. The cases that settle well are usually the ones the other side believes will actually be tried. Flanagan Law, P.C. is a trial firm, and Brendan Flanagan has tried cases to verdict in Georgia courts, including a $99.9 million wrongful death verdict in Fulton County. Past results do not guarantee or predict a similar outcome in any future case.

Who can be held responsible in a commercial truck wreck?

Responsibility can reach past the driver to the trucking company, a maintenance contractor, a freight broker, or the company that loaded the trailer. Each one is a separate question with its own proof. Flanagan Law, P.C. investigates every party that may share responsibility in an Atlanta commercial vehicle case.

What is my injury case worth?

No honest lawyer can put a number on a case before reading the medical records and understanding how the injury changed a person's life and work. Value depends on the treatment, the lasting effects, who was at fault, and the coverage available. Flanagan Law, P.C. will walk through those pieces with an injured person in Atlanta before anyone signs anything.
