

If you're using OpenAI's ChatGPT or considering upgrading to ChatGPT Plus, you may be wondering where exactly to find the Settings - Subscription section to manage your plan, check billing details, or find your renewal date. This article clears up the confusion around chatgpt billing settings, the subscription manage screen, and important facts about ChatGPT Plus pricing, trials, and renewals.

Understanding ChatGPT Plans: Free vs. ChatGPT Plus

Before diving into the settings menu, it's important to understand the difference between OpenAI's free ChatGPT plan and the paid ChatGPT Plus subscription.

- Free Plan: This is the standard access everyone gets when they sign up at ChatGPT.com. Contrary to some sources, the free plan is not a trial of ChatGPT Plus. It simply provides access to the base features of ChatGPT with limitations such as slower response times and limited availability during peak usage.
- ChatGPT Plus: This is the paid subscription that costs $20/mo on the US web checkout before tax. Plus members get many benefits like priority access, faster response times, and access to newer GPT-4 features.

So, no matter what you see online, the free plan is not a "trial," and there is no one-click upgrade trial that just flips your plan without a clear subscription process.

ChatGPT Plus Trials: What You Need to Know

While OpenAI sometimes runs targeted trial offers as part of special campaigns, invites, or eligibility-based programs, these are not standard or permanent. The offers vary and typically involve:

- Trial length: Varies widely depending on the promotion—there's no standard 30-day trial.
- Credit card requirement: Sometimes a credit card is required upfront, sometimes not, depending on the offer.
- Auto-renewal: Trials that require credit cards usually convert to paid subscriptions automatically unless canceled before the trial expires.

If you participate in a trial campaign, it will be clearly indicated, and you should receive an email confirmation explaining the terms. Always check your inbox to avoid "surprise" charges later.

Where to Find Settings - Subscription on ChatGPT.com

3. Click on your profile or name: This opens a dropdown menu.
4. Select "Settings": This takes you to the main account settings page.
5. Choose the "Subscription" tab: Within Settings, click the "Subscription" tab to view your current plan, billing details, and renewal date.

Here you can:

What Does the Renewal Date Location Look Like?

Within the “Subscription” tab, the renewal date is typically displayed prominently under your plan name. For example:

Subscription Plan Next Renewal Date Price ChatGPT Plus June 15, 2024 $20/mo (before tax)

If your subscription is set to auto-renew, that date helps you know exactly when your card will be charged next.

Important Warnings About Attached Credit Cards

If you have a credit card attached to your ChatGPT subscription:

- Warning: Charges are automatic unless you cancel before the renewal date.
- Keep an eye on the renewal date in Settings - Subscription! Missing this can lead to surprise deductions.
- Review confirmation emails from OpenAI: They send receipts and renewal reminders—do not ignore these.

For those on free plans with no card attached, you’ll not be charged at all. The system clearly checks for your payment info before activating the Plus subscription.
