Big chain stores have their place, with long opening patterns, recognisable names and plenty of stock, but a local independent repair shop offers a few advantages that are easy to overlook when you are staring at a cracked screen. Free Fusion is an independent device repair specialist on the High Street in Corby's Old Village, and the way we work is shaped by being small enough to talk properly to every customer.

The first difference is the conversation. In an independent shop you generally deal with the people who handle the repair, so questions about the fault, the likely cost and what else might be wrong get direct answers. Nobody needs to read from a script or pass your query up a chain. If your phone has a screen problem that does not fit the usual pattern, such as ghost touches, patchy colour or a display that flickers only when warm, the specialist looking at it can explain what is going on and what is worth fixing.

Range is the second difference. We repair iPhones from the 5 through to the 17 series, iPads, iPods, Apple Watches and MacBooks, alongside Samsung Galaxy, Google Pixel, Huawei, OPPO, OnePlus, Sony, Nokia, HTC and Honor phones. That means an older handset or a less common brand is still welcome. Prices are clear as well, with iPhone screens from £24.99, phone screen repair iPhone batteries from £19.99 and iPad screens from £39.99, and free diagnosis is available for local customers who are unsure what is wrong. Being local also means accountability. If a repair does not feel right, you know where to find us, and we would rather you came back and let us look than put up with a screen that is not behaving as it should.

Then there is speed and flexibility. Most smartphone screen and battery replacements are completed within about an hour at the Corby centre, and many repairs are finished the same day. If you live outside Corby, you can post a device to us by Royal Mail or DPD and have it tested and dispatched the same day it arrives, in the case of tablets and other mailed devices. Every repair is backed by a warranty, and with more than a decade of experience behind us, we know how to handle both new and older models. Trust builds over time too, and with hundreds of five star reviews and plenty of happy local customers, we take the same careful approach with a simple battery swap as we do with a tricky display fault.

Supporting a local business also keeps skilled repair work in the area. Call Free Fusion on 01536 260 558 or walk in to 62a High St, Corby, and judge the difference yourself.
