

Certain items should always travel separately from the rest of your belongings during a move, either for security reasons or to avoid the risk of loss. An experienced DMV moving company can advise on which documents and valuables deserve this extra precaution.

Important Documents to Keep Separate from a DMV Moving Company

Birth certificates, passports, social security cards, and property deeds should never be packed with general household boxes. A responsible DMV moving company recommends keeping these documents in a personal bag that travels with you rather than on the moving truck.

Valuables That Deserve Extra Caution from Movers in DMV

Jewelry, cash, and small collectibles are best transported personally rather than placed in boxes handled by movers in DMV, even trusted ones. While professional movers take great care with belongings, keeping irreplaceable small items with you removes any risk entirely.

Bulldog Movers Support for Everything Else

While certain items should travel separately, Bulldog Movers handles everything else with the same level of care. The moving supplies option provides secure boxes for household items, while the local moving service ensures safe transport for furniture and general belongings.

Medications and Essential Personal Items

Prescription medications should stay with you during the move rather than packed away, since access to them may be needed at any point during the day. Similarly, a change of clothes and basic toiletries should be kept in a personal bag in case unpacking takes longer than expected.

- Keep passports and identification documents with you
- Transport jewelry and small valuables personally
- Carry medications separately from packed boxes
- Pack a personal bag with essentials for the first day

Electronics and Data Backup Considerations

External hard drives or devices containing important backups are worth carrying personally rather than placing them in the truck, especially if they contain irreplaceable photos DMV movers or business files. This extra precaution avoids potential loss during transport.
