

Uninsured and Underinsured Motorist Claims in Midland TX Pull out your auto insurance policy and look for two lines: personal injury protection and uninsured/underinsured motorist coverage. If they're there, good. If you signed a form rejecting them, you'll want to know that now, not after a crash on Andrews Highway with a driver who has no insurance at all. Texas is an at-fault state, and every driver is supposed to carry at least 30/60/25 liability coverage. That means $30,000 for injuries to one person, $60,000 total per crash, and $25,000 for property damage. Those numbers don't stretch far against an emergency visit at Midland Memorial Hospital, a surgery, or months of missed paychecks. When the at-fault driver has no coverage, or only the bare minimum, <https://gunnercoev606.theglensecret.com/driving-in-midland-during-the-permian-basin-boom> your claim can hit a ceiling fast. That's the gap UM and UIM coverage is meant to fill. Uninsured motorist coverage can pay when the at-fault driver has no insurance. Underinsured motorist coverage can step in when their policy isn't enough to cover your losses. PIP can help with medical bills and lost wages regardless of who caused the crash. Under Texas law, insurers must offer PIP and UM/UIM, and they're included in your policy unless you rejected them in writing. Many people don't remember signing anything, so the paperwork is worth a close look.
